Our 42nd annual Bunka-Sai cultural festival is scheduled for Saturday, April 26th and Sunday, April 27th. Planning meetings begin this month under the leadership of Werner Willoughby. We have already received commitments from many performers and groups giving cultural demonstrations.

The deadline for the 2015 Adult Leader applications has been extended to January 24, 2014. A letter of intent from candidates is due on January 17th to Stephanie Ewing-Warner, the chair of the Adult Leader selection committee. See the flyer in this issue for more details.

Finally, special thanks to Werner Willoughby, a diplomatic, organized and generous individual who ably led TSCA for the past two years with his equally supportive wife, Aileen. Together, their immense patience and support along with a dining room table that served as headquarters has helped TSCA continue its mission and flourish.

Student Club

By Emiko Kranz

As we start up the new year, the 2013 Torrance Delegation is starting up activities with the TSCA Student Club. However, many people are still wondering: what is the Student Club? As the president, it's my responsibility to fill you in!

The Student Club is a group of students who, under the name of the Torrance Sister City Association, comes together to learn about Japanese culture as an assembly of past, current, and prospective candidates of the annual exchange program. Once a month (the second Saturday of each month, to be exact) we meet and engage in activities where we learn, interact, and volunteer together to keep our bonds strong. Activities range from field trips, cooking, eating, watching movies, and doing volunteer work to support other Japanese American foundations in the area. We may also do some fundraising to help lower the costs of activities. Volunteering, eating, and socializing with other cool students interested in Japan? What more do you need?

Getting involved in the Student Club is a great way to get involved with TSCA if interested in applying for the annual Torrance-Kashiwa exchange. Any incoming hopefuls who join will have the benefit of getting to know alums and to show their character. It can only help!

All Torrance students (from North High, South High, Torrance High, West High, Bishop Montgomery, CAMS, and El Camino) are welcome to join, as well as all past delegates! If interested, please contact me by Facebook or email: emi.kranz@gmail.com. Next meeting is Jan. 18 at 3:00 PM.

Thank you, and see you in this new year! Akemashite omedetou gozaimasu!

Student Selection Committee Update

By Steven Ihde

After successfully chairing the Student Exchange Committee last year, Lori Chong Eurich has stepped down to assume the role of TSCA president. Under her leadership, she and her committee worked diligently to choose the eight students that represented our organization and city last summer in Kashiwa.

I'm pleased to be taking over from Lori and am grateful for her detailed notes and insight. This will be my third year on the committee. Joining me on this important team are: David Gelbaum, 2014 Adult Leader; Lori Chong Eurich, our fearless leader; David Kranz, father of Emiko, a 2013 exchange student; Jay Matsumoto, from South High School and 2013 exchange student; and finally Marilyn Rubin, whose son Sandler was an exchange student.

Committee members made visits in the fall to Torrance, West, South and North high schools and Bishop Montgomery and made presentations to student clubs and Japanese language classes to recruit potential candidates. Past exchange students helped support this effort. The presentations were short and informal with personal reflections from the 2013 delegates. Prospective applicants also had the opportunity to watch a brief video produced by Jay Matsumoto highlighting activities from last summer's exchange.

The deadline to apply was Thursday, December 19, 2013. Applications are currently being processed. Everyone attending the alumni reunion on January 11 will have a chance to meet the 2014 applicants. Thank you in advance to the committee members for their time and support.

Cultural Exchange

By Matthew Medlock

Foreign Language Lecturer in Kashiwa

With the New Year on its way, many of us take a leap of faith and set goals to challenge ourselves in the oncoming year. Many might say they want to do something like jump out of plane or go to an exotic place. But for less adventurous, maybe a time of self-reflection to address certain character flaws about themselves.

For me, I am at a crossroad. When I was younger, I had a dream of traveling the world and living in a different country from my own. I strived to achieve that goal, with success, but now I am at a cross. What is next on my journey?

From living in Japan for over year, I can tell you that Japanese people love to celebrate anything and so any excuse to party is welcomed! But, some of these celebrations come from age-old traditions such as Tori no Ichi. Tori no Ichi is a festival particular to the Kanto region of Japan. It is held in the month November, on the day of the rooster (Chinese calendar), which normally comes every 12 days. On the days this festival takes place, copious amounts of food and drink are consumed (like with every celebration in Japan! ;D), but special ornaments called kumade (bear claw), which are bamboo rakes that are adorned with good luck charms to bring luck and wealth into the New Year, make the festival what it's truly about. These "rakes" are generally used by businesses to make sure they 'rake' in the profits and have a prosperous year.

This year, I got a chance to see these beautiful, eclectic rakes in person. They range in all different sizes from a golf-ball size to a yoga-ball size.

There is custom that is said in accordance to size of the kumade, that every year you buy a kumade it has to be bigger than the previous year to better your odds of getting more luck. I would have liked to buy one but I did not because I did not want to continue and uphold this tradition for it would be a hassle to buy a bigger and bigger one every year. Where would I put it? But seeing these kumade made me think about my future and what I am to expect this coming year – what should I do at this crossroad I'm at? What will this next year be for me? Well for one, training the new ELT and for two, maybe traveling a little more.

In 2014, I will be entering into my final year at Ichikashi – what will the future hold for me? In the past, I focused on how to define myself as a person, and I thought it was determined by what I had done in the past. But as the future unfolds, I realize that it is not the past that defines you, it is the path you make that defines you. So whatever the future has in store for me, I will welcome it with open arms and carve a path of my own that I will be proud of. Here is to you, 2014!

Memories of Japan

The fourth in a mini-series of reports from the 2013 Kashiwa exchange group Compiled by Gail Roulette

Each summer TSCA sends a student delegation to our sister city Kashiwa. Before they go, we give them eight two-hour orientation sessions to prepare them for the trip. Each of these students, usually high-school age, and their adult leader selects a particular topic to research. They write their findings prior to going, then write a report after the trip describing what they have learned. For the next few issues we will present excerpts from their experiences based on their post-trip reports.

Japanese Appearances

By Jay Matsumoto

During my 21 days of adventure and excitement, I visited many parts of Japan and observed the several appearances of Japan's citizens. I also talked with both a young and old Japanese family, resulting in various responses.

School uniforms. In Japan, most schools require uniforms. Typically, students don't have to wear uniforms until middle school, but some public elementary schools still require it. The high school girl I hosted from Japan told me that she likes her uniform but would prefer to wear her own clothing instead. The only chance she gets to wear her own clothes is weekends and summer break...and, she likes to shop. The male uniform is usually a button-up white short sleeve shirt that can be worn with a black coat in the winter. Takahiro Takikawa, a delegate from this year, despises his uniform because he always has to wear slacks.

Hair. In Tokyo and Kyoto, I noticed that many young women have their hair bleached or dyed a different color other than black and wear makeup to look extremely young. A member of my second host family, Lisa Hirano, is 18 and working towards becoming a beautician. She has been dyeing her hair since middle school and experiments with different shades of brown and gold. Her father doesn't support completely the idea of dyeing hair but reluctantly allows it because Japan is modernizing towards this trend.

Pierced ears. The idea of guys piercing their ears was another thing that bothered Mr. Hirano, quoting "only gay people used to do it" but recently Japan has been changing and it is becoming more and more popular.

Foreign influences are affecting Japan and changing the traditional lifestyles.

Harajuku Fashion

By Melanie Nomiya

Harajuku is known as the heart of fashion in Japan—top trends start here and fashionable teens stroll around in their unique outfits.

I was fortunate to take a visit to Harajuku with my first host family during the free weekend on Saturday. We took the train, which took approximately one hour, then headed towards Takeshita Street—the most famous and crowded area of Harajuku. It is a pedestrian-only street lined with an infinite number of shops, boutiques, and cafes.

The most popular styles in Harajuku are street fashion and kawaii (cute) fashion. Street fashion is a popular trend among young adults and teenagers in the urban areas of Japan. Some popular street fashion items include oversized t-shirts, studded clothing, bright colors, platform sneakers...or the more feminine pastels, laces, chiffons, floral prints, etc.

On Sunday many teens take part in Harajuku fashion walks... where they are dressed up in cosplay, gothic lolita, visual kei, decora, and so on. "Cosplay" is a style where people dress up as their favorite anime, manga, or video game characters. Gothic lolita has a more dark and edgy style.

Many stores had decora or "kawaii" fashion accessories, like plastic hair clips and huge teddy bear key chains to accentuate one's cuteness.

I noticed that in Harajuku nearly everyone has their own sense of style, expressing their own personality through their clothing. No one judges each other for what they wear; the district is an example of non-conformity.

[Editors note: When Melanie gave her report she was dressed in an outfit purchased at Harajuku - complete with hair clips, green chiffon blouse, white floral print skirt and interesting shoes!]
